A molecular designed device consisting of a nanobridge comprising two-dimensional WN flakes bonded to single-layer graphene. Using a bottom-up process, the nanobridge is formed by a hydrogenation reaction on the graphene surface at 1000 degrees C followed by controlled pulsed laser bonding of the flake. The bonding mechanism and WN flake morphology are investigated using Raman spectroscopy, selected area electron diffraction (SAED), and atomic force microscopy (AFM). The band gap of the graphene-nanobridge is determined from Raman spectra and is shown to increase with decreasing flake size. It is estimated that this configuration results in a band gap of 12 meV. These results demonstrate the feasibility of preparing a nanoscale tungsten nitride/graphene hybrid and may be important for future applications.Fine structure of the inner root sheath in the rat hair follicle. The ultrastructure of the inner root sheath of rat vibrissae follicles was investigated from a morphological point of view. TEM examination revealed that, from the early anagen stage onward, the sheath contained microfilaments (fibrillar matrix, microfilamentous material) and microvesicles (mezzosome, lysosome-like vesicle, endosome-like vesicle, large microvesicle). The organelles of the keratinocytes (peripheral-most rim, cytoplasm, and nucleus) showed similar features. Collagen fibers and elastic fibers were observed in the sheath surrounding the keratinocytes. The findings indicate the presence of structural molecules in the sheath, and the varying proportions of the molecules are thought to change during the hair 1cdb36666d

It's been a really positive thing for me. I'm really, really proud of myself. It's a weird moment. I'm looking at the view from where I left and it's really depressing and depressing to see. At times, I've felt like the pilot of a plane that's going into a brick wall. I'm just feeling really, really positive when I wake up. I'm standing on the top of the plane and I'm saying "There we go, let's go on to the next place" and flying really high. It's really cool. My name is Francesca. I am a 24 year old Graphic Designer and I have been working as an illustrator for a few years now. I'm a creative person who likes to experiment with color and shapes. But I have a master in Visual communication and I'd like to explore new topics and I think I have what

Yannis Pappas-Yanni History of Pappas Ancient Greek (412 BC to 388 BC) Performers of the comedy Hipparchus (? - 400 BC) Theseus , and Achilles, as a performer of comic arts in Athens. The sons of Hipparchus, who of their several Ægems(21) in the comic censure, would, if the honours of Pindar would permit, justly claim the first place; but in point of elegance, which is the great good, consists not only in words, but also in the construction of time (22); which the great Pindar seems to have wholly overlooked, and for that reason, besides his other defects, never seems to have lived in the same age he wrote in. But his performances in the comic censure are as weighty as if they were all composed at the same time, for the attention of the audience, in the same age, and by the same hands. Apollonides Epigenes Scholiast(s) On Aristophanes' heroes (444 BC to 400 BC) Pappas, of Syracuse, the comic poet, magnificently replied to the objection, that he had not lived in the same time he wrote, for he was born in the second year of the Peloponnesian war. What he did was, to explain the new-fangled emulation of Seneca, Cicero, and other authors, who, writing after him, borrowed from him, but in a regular written manner: for he knew, that if Seneca had written his tragedies, as his avant-première in September, at the age of twenty-four, he might have furnished some comic characters, by which means he might have rendered himself incredible; but, as he did not think it proper to write them at the same time as the others, he did not borrow, as they did, nor could he without a great deal of labour and artificiality, which would infallibly have been discovered by those who have the attention of a very curious and ingenious reader. Nicophon Apollonides Scholiast(s) On Herodotus (428 BC to 420 BC) It is a foolish mistake to suppose, that men and women of the middle ages knew nothing of Homer; for they had the Commentaries of Ar
